

ON THE ROCKS

Scottish Student
Arts Festival

Festival on the Rocks is an exciting new national Scottish arts festival, being held from the 19th to the 26th April in St Andrews, Scotland.

Its aim is to bridge the gap between students and professional artists, and already has over 70 events and attractions ranging from cyber-theatre to fashion design installations to buskers and a Punch and Judy show.

The festival will transform the whole of St Andrews into a hub of the arts, and together with its 1930s seaside theme we think it will be an amazing and unique event.

Half Cut Film Festival

 will be major part of the week. While there are plenty of great (and not so great) films being made by students all over Scotland at the moment, we still lack a widely recognised forum to showcase them to the public. The festival's main purpose is to provide something like this - to help legitimise student film and also give professionals the chance to see up-and-coming talent.

And of course to have a great night with a silver screen, red carpet, and a VIP reception.

What we need is films, as many as possible - whether you have never touched a camera in your life, or have studied film for years.

The festival will take place over two nights – the first (April 20th) showing those films selected but not nominated for an award, and the second (April 23rd) showing nominated films, and judges will decide the winners on the night.

You can find submission forms, more details and terms and conditions on our website: www.ontherocksfestival.com
